FOSGATE AUDIONICS TO PREVIEW A/V STREAMER
AT CEDIA EXPO 2003

*--In-the-Works Model Scheduled to Debut in 2004
With Audiophile-Quality Sonics --*

Tempe, AZ, September 3, 2003 – Fosgate Audionics will feature a “sneak peek” demonstration of an upcoming audio/video streamer at its CEDIA Expo display, booth #1508, September 5 – 7, at the Indiana Convention Center in Indianapolis, IN.

Though the streamer’s final specifications and feature-set have yet to be confirmed, the demonstration will offer a look at what consumers can look forward to in the first half of 2004.

“The streamer we plan to show at CEDIA will be an example of how the final version will allow end-users to enjoy the audio and video files stored on their PC or server throughout their entire homes,” said Joe Dahlquist, Product Manager, Fosgate Audionics. “You can even save media to the substantial, internal hard drive, just in case you prefer not to turn on the computer.”

“Like all Fosgate Audionics models, this streamer will cater to audiophiles first and foremost, with sonics designed to please the most ardent enthusiast.”

Fosgate Audionics' upcoming audio/video streamer will include all significant codecs, including mpeg 2 and 4, as well as mp3 pro, wav, ogg, wma, and more. Also featured will be an intuitive graphical interface for easy navigation, control and playback.

All journalists and show attendees are encouraged to visit booth #1508 at the CEDIA Expo for a glimpse of the future in high-end streaming media.
